

$150,000 FOR FALSE ARREST.

Robert L. Martin Sues Wealthy Men Who Accused Him of Perjury.

SAYS HE WAS HARASSED.

He and Treasurer Velthusen, of the Delaware Surety Company, Were Dragged About in the Courts.

Robert L. Martin, President of the Delaware Surety Company, who, with Treasurer Harry Velthusen, was dragged up and down through the courts of New York on a charge of perjury during the bitter fight between the Amalgamated Copper Company and the Heintzes, has turned on his accusers. Two suits have been begun by Martin in behalf of Martin demanding $50,000 and $100,000 damages respectively from the Boston and Montana Copper and Silver Mining Company and its directors, Albert S. Bigelow, William J. Ladd, Edward S. Groves, Joseph S. Bigelow, Frank Klepetek and Edward G. Perkins.

Leonard Lewissohn was also a director in one of the companies which formed the Amalgamated to fight the Heintzes, the Montana copper kings. Mr. Lewissohn died last spring.

Mr. Martin's complaint recites that he was arrested on a charge of perjury in swearing that the Delaware Surety Company had a paid-up capital of $1,000,000. It had become a guarantee for the Heintzes in their organization to fight the Amalgamated. There were hearings before Magistrate Olmsted from Oct. 12 to Nov. 23, and the accused were held for the Grand Jury. They were locked up in the Tombs, and the late Justice Beach, too sick to wade through the mass of testimony, dismissed a writ of habeas corpus.

They put up $100,000 cash bail and on Jan. 10 were indicted. May 8 Recorder Gottschalk dismissed the indictments, declaring that no perjury had been committed. For false arrest and for being harassed and put to "thousands of dollars of expense in defending himself" Martin asks $100,000 damages.

He alleges that his persecutors secured the publication of the story of his alleged perjury all over the country, discrediting and injuring his good name, and for this he wants $50,000.

Mr. Martin lives in Germantown, Philadelphia.

PANIC ON BOAT AS BEAM BROKE

Scramble by Men and Women for Life-Pre-servers in the Lower Bay.

A panic in which women and men fastened life-preservers to themselves followed the breaking of the walking beam on the Patten line steamboat Little Silver today in the lower bay between Sandy Hook and the Narrows.

The steamboat left Pleasure Bay at 7 o'clock this morning with 200 passengers from Long Branch and about thirty valuable horses, with various traps and carriages, which were exhibited at the Long Branch Horse Show. The steamboat had passed the Hook some time when suddenly the walking-beam, which connects the engine with the paddle-wheels, broke. The piece crashed through the roof of the boat and into the cabin and lower decks.

Immediately there was the wildest excitement. The boat seemed to come to a standstill with a jolt, while the engines churned wildly on a weightless beam, shaking the boat from end to end. Many of the women passengers ran for the locker stowed with life-preservers and strapped the cork-lined canvas sacks to themselves. Several ran to the rail, and it is said would have jumped overboard had they not been restrained. Many of the men passengers were also strapped on the life-preservers.

There was no danger of sinking, however, and the engine abated its speed. As the engineer could shut off the steam and thus stop the shaking of the boat, a distress signal was sent up by tug and tug came to the rescue. There was some delay, however, as Capt. Bart Edwards, of the tug, would not agree to pay the price demanded by the tug for towing his boat in.

It is said that the captain finally agreed to pay $100 and the Crescent brought the distressed steamboat and her passengers to its pier at the foot of West Thirtieth street.

Capt. Edwards attributed the accident to a flaw in the walking-beam.

Those who saw the monarch as he drove in an open carriage from Victoria station to Buckingham Palace realized that his recovery had been satisfactory. Though far from robust, the King had

THREE HURT IN CRASH OF BOATS

Tug Summers Cuts Down Schooner Brooks Off Sea Gate Beach.

The tug E. T. Summers, of New York, ran into the two-masted schooner Beale Brook, laden with lumber from New York for Atlantic City, off North Point, Sea Gate, today, cutting the schooner amidships on the port side nearly to the water's edge and injuring three men.

The schooner was in command of Capt. Alfred Silbee, of Bangor, Me., who says that the commander of the tug must have misunderstood the signals which were given as to the side the Brooks would pass. The schooner, favored by wind and tide, was making good speed down the bay when the collision occurred.

With the first impact the upper rigging of the schooner fell to the deck, striking two sailors. Carl Anderson, thirty years old, of No. 519 Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn, received a gash six inches long on the scalp and his left arm was broken, and Charles Wilson, colored, of Gloucester, Mass., forty-one years old, cook on the schooner, internal injuries and a fracture of his left shoulder. Harry Barnes, twenty-eight years old, living in Sussex street, Jersey City, a fireman, the tug was thrown against the boat-boilers and badly burned on face and body.

The two men injured on the schooner were placed in a small boat and towed ashore, where they were attended by a physician, after which they returned to the sailing vessel. Barnes was brought to New York to be attended at a hospital.

The tug lost half of her pilot-house and her stack. The steering gear was also badly damaged. The schooner, after a delay of several hours, proceeded on her way to Atlantic City, to undergo repairs there.

HUNNEWELL CASE STIRS SOCIETY.

Well-Known New York Woman Involved in the Scandal Through Her Babbling in the Delirium of Fever—Divorce Proceedings Begun in Boston.

MRS. HOLLIS H. HUNNEWELL.

At Newport, at Saratoga, in the quiet country places down on Long Island, in the clubs of this city, the sole subject of conversation today is the Hunnewell divorce suit, begun yesterday in Boston.

Mrs. Hollis Hunnewell, in the complaint she has filed, does not mention the name of the co-respondent, but the name is as well known to New York society as it would be to the public at large were it printed on banners and swung to the winds at every street intersection along Broadway.

It was in the free and easy companionship of a winter resort frequented by a small and select membership of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and New Orleans society that the Hunnewell divorce suit had its beginning.

Betrayed in Delirium.

It was the babbling of a society woman in delirium that disclosed to a husband and a mother the details of an affair they had only suspected.

It is supposed that religious reasons were all that kept the husband from filing a suit for divorce at that time, but in view of the Hunnewell proceedings the belief is that the courts of this State will be called upon to issue a decree of separation, at least.

Hollis Hunnewell is over six feet tall, muscular as a prize-fighter and swarthy as a native of the tropics. Much of the darkness of his skin is due to his love for outdoor sports. Whenever he is free to do so he goes without a hat. His black curly hair furnishes sufficient covering for his head in his opinion.

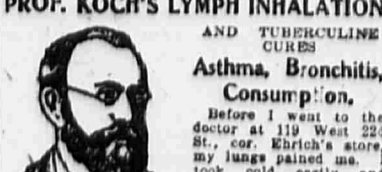

Families Intimate.

The Hunnewells and the family of the young woman whose name is insistently mentioned in connection with the divorce suit were acquainted for some years before the heads of both families decided to go South for the winter of 1900-1901.

Both decided upon the same quiet, out-of-the-way place, and when they had settled in the pine woods their hunches were scarcely a mile apart.

The husband of the woman involved, it was noticed never spoke to Hollis Hunnewell. Gradually he dropped out of the sports and games of the community, and it was the common report that he was engaged in the occupation of endeavoring to drink himself to death.

MOTHER ASKS COURT TO COMMIT SON.

Wealthy Real-Estate Operator, Says Boy Is Mentally Weak.

Justice Greenbaum in the Supreme Court today refused to commit Harris Schnitzer, son of the well-known real estate operator, Hyman Schnitzer, to an asylum unless proper expert medical testimony is given as to the boy's alleged weak mental condition.

There is not enough testimony before me at present to warrant a commitment," said the Justice, after the boy's mother had told about her son's peculiar actions. "I will not commit him until I have the testimony of some physicians who have examined him."

Charles G. F. Wahl, counsel for the boy's father, asked for a formal commitment for the boy. He declared that young Schnitzer had become mentally unbalanced by reason of excesses and that he was dangerous if allowed at large.

Mrs. Hannah Schnitzer, the boy's mother, testified that she believed her son weak mentally and that the proceedings for the commitment were instituted with her knowledge and consent.

Justice Greenbaum adjourned the hearing until tomorrow so that Mr. Wahl could have physicians in court. The boy is at Bellevue Hospital.

SUICIDE AFTER DEATH BY BOLT.

Young Man, Grieving for Grandmother Killed by Lightning, Took Acid.

Grieving because his grandmother had been struck and killed by lightning young William Lacey, seventeen years old, of No. 25 Central avenue, West Hudson, committed suicide early today by taking carbolic acid.

The circumstances of the young man's death are most pitiful.

He was the favorite grandchild of Mrs. Garity, who lived at No. 248 Boulevard. Last Sunday a ball of lightning struck and knocked her, apoplexy followed and the old woman died within a half hour.

Lacey grieved deeply and talked of nothing but his grandmother's death. He tried to console himself, but failed, and he was found on his bed unconscious and holding a photograph of Mrs. Garity in his hand. In the other hand he held a letter to his mother, telling her that he was very sorry to leave her, but that he could not live any longer without his grandmother and was going to join her.

A doctor was hurriedly called, and while there was no bottle anywhere around a strong smell of carbolic acid indicated the means of suicide.

Lacey was hurried to the North Hudson Hospital, but died shortly after his arrival.
